Parties or Factions?

IN A RECENT issue of one of our favorite daily papers, we came across another of those periodic appeals for party divisions in Georgia as the means of bringing about an ideal social and political condition.

The writer, whose life experience we believe would not reach back to the period when Georgia was rent by two-party strife, pointed to the passing of the late Tom Watson as the turning point downward in idealism. He reasoned that a permanent opposing lineup insures permanent watchfulness and, theoretically, a healthier political situation.

The theorizing is plausible—but it is false. The policies of the Populist party of half a century ago, which were the fighting line of the two elements, have eventually come to maturity and passed on into oblivion. These measures for which the party battled, today would be recognized as mild—what with governmental patriotism and regulations of life's most intimate right and responsibility. The party passed away, but the seed sprouted and bore fruit.

Particularly, one point mentioned in the recent editorial comment, was that involving the negro voter; and the point was made that a two-party system would give guarantee of practical solution. That's exactly where our friend the two-party is of his base. As memory serves us at this far-removed moment, we recall that most of the eye-gouging and beard-pulling we ever saw around the polling places in Statesboro was due to the struggle for the negro votes. Everybody wanted the negro to vote, but they wanted him on their side. Now, Akins, a fighting Democrat, pulled handful of Seah Oglesby's beard out and scattered it to the wind when a turpentine truck came up with a load of negro voters under the direction of Ben Robertson, of the Woodburn community.

All the eye-gouging we ever saw was between Populists and Democrats. It was not so much a matter of issues as a matter of victory at the polls. The Sinkhole, almost solidly Populist, furnished most of the Populist warriors—Williamson, Andersons and Rushings—and they met at the polls in Statesboro by a solid phalanx of Akinses and Brannens. We meet a friend occasionally whose eyes still show the fingerprints of Lawrence Akins received in a battle in the streets across from the court house.

More than a half century has passed, and party lines have vanished—these divided factions have even intermarried to some extent—but whoever believes that a two-party system is desirable, is simply overlooking the truth that mere factionalism, which divides this year and unites next year, is far less objectionable.

Has Science Failed In Its Research?

IN THE YEARS which are now sometime past two much-valued friends whom we appreciated offered us voluntarily the use of separate books which each had read, written by alleged scientists who had sought to discount the existence of a Supreme Controlling Power.

"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God."

Both these friends accepted that declaration and found pleasure in trying to pass along the reasoning. We laid the books aside for some days, then returned them with explanation that we had not found time to read them. And that was the truth—any time is too valuable to spend in that pursuit. Both these men are in their graves, both having died by their own hand because life had ceased to offer them joy and hope.

We are not sure the line of argument which had given these friends the satisfaction which they sought to share with us. It was probably along the line that life was gradually coming into existence through the evolutionary action of atoms—from which has eventually in the ages brought into existence a more or less active ex-

HIGHWAY GROUPS PLAN ACTIVITIES

U. S. No. 25 Sponsors Hold Meeting at Waynesboro For Recent Organization Work

The U. S. Highway 25 Association in session Wednesday of last week passed a resolution to seek the extension of U. S. 25 deep into Brunswick and out to the Golden Isles if possible.

One hundred and five delegates representing cities from Brunswick to Augusta were guests of Association Vice-President Porter Carwell, Director John F. Ward and the Burke County Board of Trade at the Waynesboro American Legion home.

The name officially selected is the "U. S. Highway 25 Highway Association." A by-laws committee composed of Porter W. Carwell, Waynesboro, chairman; Hubert Reeves, Milton, and Scott Mison, Augusta, was appointed by Association President J. D. Gould Jr., Brunswick.

It is noted that the national association would be incorporated in Jeep and Wayne county, inasmuch as the offices are situated in the city where the executive secretary is located.

Chauncey Lever, executive secretary-treasurer, in his report to the association stated that each county has paid in full its financial allocation with the exception of one, and that a check had been assured for that. He also reported that cities in states north had shown an enthusiastic interest in joining the association at an early date.

Robert Carroll, Brunswick, ways committee chairman, gave the report of his committee and was given authority to have 50,000 stamp maps after hearing suggestions of the members present.

Joe Warren, representing the State Department of Commerce, urged the cities represented to erect wayside parks for the convenience of tourists. Plans for these parks were distributed to each individual present.

An invitation from Millen was accepted as the next meeting place. Several invitations were extended.

essay when the price of commercial fertilizer stayed high. In looking at the trends to use commercial fertilizer, the indications are it will continue to stay high. Texas and that area is an excellent example of what is happening to the usage of fertilizer. In 1936 the entire state of Texas used about 80,000 tons of commercial fertilizer. Then last year that state alone increased to more than 500,000 tons of fertilizer. The other "no fertilizer" states are also increasing in a like manner.

IT WASN'T A PINE TREE GROWING FROM THE ROOF

One of the best "believe-it-or-not" stories which ever came our way, slipped into oblivion because we investigated too closely. Jake Akins met us on the street and told us that a pine tree more than a foot tall was growing from the roof wall of a filling station on East Main street. He told us he had just passed that way and observed the oddity.

At the filling station young Bland had never heard of the oddity, but was willing to investigate. We searched and failed. Jake came along and pointed out the affair—and it was merely the brush of an old broom which had been placed on the wall in a cushion for the radio wires which crossed the wall.

Moral: Don't look too close when you must mystery stories.

NEGRO FARMERS CONDUCTING DRIVE

Leaders Are Ambitious
To Reach Membership Goal
Equal To That Last Year

(M. M. MARTIN)

The Bulloch County Farm Bureau membership drive is in full swing. With only about a month to go to complete this, all officers and membership committees are rushing trying to help Bulloch reach its quota. They are trying to get all the old members reinstated and get a substantial increase in new members. As your negro county agent and as your servant in helping to raise the standard of living conditions for all of our people who are living, both directly and indirectly on the farm, I am appealing to you to join this organization today. It is our duty to help this organization help us. It is a reflection on our intelligence and on our manhood to not join. It shows that we are unthoughtful and ungrateful for what the Farm Bureau has done and is doing for us. And it shows that we are human parasites and riders of progress and prosperity.

During the past week five negro chapters met, Willow Hill, Willow Hill Veterans, William James Hill Veterans, New Hope and New Sandridge. All of these chapters were pushing their membership drive. At the Willow Hill chapter, Mr. Robert Wynn, assistant county agent, and Mr. Oscar Wynn, veteran farmer, leader and former member of the board of county commissioners, were guest speakers. Their talks aroused much interest and enthusiasm. Garfield Hall being so aroused, introduced a "bill" which states that: "The landlords of persons (renters, tenants, or wage hands) should influence these workers to join the Farm Bureau. And if these workers do not join voluntarily, that the landlords should pay for their membership and give them some extra work to let them work it out."

The "Hall bill" was taken up with the other chapters and approved. We are asking farmers to not let this have to be done; but if it is necessary, the negro chapters are asking the landlords to help us.

Hog Support Prices Will Be Maintained

Hog support prices as announced by the United States Department of Agriculture will hold until March 31, 1950.

Monthly hog price support levels for October, 1949, through March, 1950, were $16.49 per hundred for October, $15.00 for November, $14.40 for December, $14.90 for January, $15.50 for February and $16.20 for March. The support levels are based on 90 per cent of the September 15, 1949, parity price of hogs of $17.60. Local hog farmers should remember that peanut hogs are supported at $2.15 per hundred under these prices and Georgia corn fed hogs about 65 cents per hundred under these prices.

WATER SUPPLY IS BEING INCREASED

Not Only For Livestock
But Farmers Begin To Construct Fish Ponds

Bulloch county's livestock will eventually have ample water, and maybe the farmers will have a place to fish. Montrose Graham, manager of the West Side Farmers Co-Operative Association, reports.

Mr. Graham stated that when he assumed his duties with the co-operative in June the fifteen men from the West Side community that had banded themselves together to buy two heavy tractors and all the related equipment for clearing land and building ponds had already completed some 108 ponds in the county.

Since June 15, they have built two ponds for Fred H. Smith and Fred G. Blitch and one pond each for Lloyd Brown, P. Joyner, J. W. Braswell, E. L. Womack, Pete Wilson, John H. Brannen, Homer S. Durden (which is a 600-acre job), and put a dam back at the old Riggs mill site for Frank Rushing that will put water over some 600 acres of land.

Most of these some 120 ponds were built to give ample water for livestock during dry periods such as the county has had during the past few weeks, but all are being stocked with fish so that farmers can have some recreation on their own farm.

W. H. Smith Jr., president of the co-operative, stated Saturday that the original date of some $50,000 had been reduced to about $15,000, and that they were expecting to retire all the indebtedness by the first of the year. When the equipment was bought some two years ago these fifteen men thought they would do work on their own farms only but it soon developed that too many of their neighbors wanted work to continue this practice. They have worked in two adjoining counties and every community in the county. They had to buy a truck and trailer to move the heavy tractors from place to place.
